

GOVERNOR WILSON AT REST ON CHRISTMAS

Will Spend Saturday In Staunton, Va., His Birthplace, Where Celebration Will Be Held

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 25.—As he spends most of his days of rest, so did President-elect Wilson spend Christmas in deep sleep. The governor had a little fever last night but was quite improved tonight. He suffered a little from exposure in his automobile ride to and from Trenton yesterday and Mrs. Wilson prescribed the rest cure for him today.

"Mr. Wilson is much better," she said late today on coming out of the bungalow in a grey sweater vest on her way to a neighbor's house. "He had a fever last night, but is much better today. I thought he might be getting a little grip but he's much improved after today's rest."

The morning hours at the Wilson house were merry. Friends came along to wish them a merry Christmas and gifts came in wagonloads. The family rose early and found their stockings filled by Santa Claus. The Wilsons still believe in the old custom.

The governor had a hard day's work in Trenton on Monday and was quite busy Tuesday, so he felt that he needed Christmas to rest. Tonight he was in his study reading letters. Tomorrow he will be in Trenton and on Friday will leave for Staunton, Va., his birthplace, where on Saturday, his birthday, there will be a celebration in his honor.

THE PROTECTION OF SPUTUM

Infected sputum is transferred from one person to another in the following ways: By coughing; by putting all manner of articles such as pencil points, etc., into the mouth; and by expectorating the sputum and allowing it to dry so that it becomes dust and passes into the atmosphere of the room. During the act of coughing, particles of sputum are thrown as far as ten feet from the mouth of the patient. These fine particles or droplets should be caught by holding a tissue paper handkerchief or Japanese napkin in front of the mouth as a shield. After the coughing, the droplets of sputum are on the inside. The main mass of sputum coughed up may be expectorated on one edge of the napkin and the napkin rolled so as to include the sputum in the center of the roll. The ends of the roll should then be twisted so as not to permit its unrolling, and the little roll of tissue paper burned. In this way the droplets are prevented from coming in contact with the outside world and the whole mass is disinfected by burning. The only expense for the person is the cost of the tissue paper napkins. If the mass of sputum is not expectorated into the napkin, it should be expectorated into some form of cuspidor in which it is not allowed to dry before being disinfected. There are two types of cuspidors. A paper cuspidor may either be carried in the pocket or placed on the table. These cuspidors when filled should be burned. In this way the sputum is not allowed to dry into dust and is disinfected by the heat. A permanent cuspidor may be used. It should always contain some fluid, preferably a disinfecting fluid such as five per cent carbolic acid or its equivalent which serves to prevent the sputum from drying and to disinfect it. Under no conditions should infected sputum be discharged about the house or grounds or in dry cuspidors, save into the paper cuspidors that are burned before the sputum has time to dry. A patient should never cough without having a shield in front of his mouth to catch the little particles of sputum.

A. H. T. A. MEETING.

Dec. 23rd 1912 will go down in the annals of the history of Monett Sub-order No. 184 as a red letter day.

The weather being all that could be desired, clear, cool and pleasant with a beautiful moon light, the attendance was exceptionally good; seventy three members of Sub-order No. 184.

Three candidates were initiated in the work of the order. Rev. W. A. Todd, Bob Callaway and Fred Salzer. Seven applications were presented and referred to the proper committees.

After the regular session a recess was taken and refreshments were served, which consisted of wieners, rolls, pickles and coffee, which was appreciated by all. Brothers Galick and Hisaw each had a box of cigars which were passed around.

The president, J. F. Mermoud, presented the officers of the Sub-order each with a small and useful gift. The order in token of the good work of our secretary Bro. Bounous made him a handsome present, for which he in turn thanked the order in a few appropriate words.

Addresses were made by Rev. Knott, Rev. Todd, Dr. West, Fred Salzer and Bob Callaway.

A little unexpected excitement was created by a member having an attack of acute appendicitis. The prompt work of Dr. West prevented serious complications, for particulars see Bob Callaway who assisted the doctor.

Fred Salzer was somewhat rough with furniture, but felt proud for being a full fledged Anti.

As the lodge was ready to adjourn, about 1 a. m. some young men in a buggy driving home from Monett, created a disturbance by yelling on the highway as they passed the meeting place of the Antis.

In a short time by order of the President, the first committee was ordered out to find out who they were. Earl Callaway tendered his father's automobile and in a few minutes the young men were explaining to the committee how it happened.

Disturbing the peace by yelling and shooting on the highways is a thing that the Antis have promised to put a stop to, and from what is already known if this continues, several young men from near by neighborhoods will shortly have to explain before a justice of the peace.

A merry Christmas and a happy New Year to all.

Official Cor.

A. E. BANKS.

THE NATIONAL FOR DECEMBER.

David Fuller said generations ago, "Undoubtedly the Lord could have made a better fruit than the strawberry, but undoubtedly he never did." So it may be said of the December National Magazine, there may be better magazines that you have read, but you do not know just where to locate them.

One of the most remarkable magazine articles published for some time is "The Battlefield of Love," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, America's favorite woman writer. Written while inspired by the historic French environment, wherein Abelard and Heloise lived and became the world's most famous lovers, Mrs. Wilcox has contributed a sympathetic and historically valuable article. The illustrations in themselves are priceless, being reproduced from paintings which Mrs. Wilcox herself secured at great cost. The article, with the poem "Astrolabius," to the son of Abelard and Heloise, of whom so little is known, is generally admitted to be one of the best things that Mrs. Wilcox has done.

Mrs. Buckley, of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, of Fort Scott, Kan., Mr. and Mrs. Kelso, of Springfield, were among those who attended Bert Boyer's funeral, Thursday morning.
